BATTLE OF AGUACATE.

Captain General Weyler, in the Fight, Narrowly Escaped Capture.

After the Battle the Captain General Fell Back on Guanabacoa—The Wily General Again Attacked But Refused to Fight—Excitement in Havana.

HAVANA, Aug. 13.—The battle of Aguacate occurred Monday night and Tuesday morning. It was the bloodiest battle that has taken place for several months, and resulted in an overwhelming victory for the patriots. The Spaniards left 200 dead on the field.

There is a strong belief here that Gen. Weyler, who has recently returned to Havana, was in the fight, and the battle was the result of an attempt to capture or kill him.

Weyler left Matanzas with a guard of only 80 men, but he had three strong columns posted on the road over which he was to travel. Gen. Castillo, who had 1,500 men in the vicinity, determined to try and capture the Spanish leader. He whipped the Spaniards in the fighting on Monday, but failed to capture Weyler. Tuesday the Spaniards returned in force, and the Cubans, after giving them three or four volleys, broke into detached bands and scattered.

Gen. Molina and Col. Alden, who lead the Spanish, are reported wounded.

After the fight at Aguacate Weyler fell back on Guanabacoa. Five miles from there Gen. Rodriguez attacked Weyler, who now had an escort of 4,000 men, but the Spaniard refused to give battle, though the patriots constantly harassed his troops. Rodriguez followed Weyler to within sight of Guanabacoa.

There is great excitement in Havana over Weyler's failure to check the patriots.

The patriots are keeping their word and making things lively for the Spaniards. A report of another big fight near Sagua la Grande has reached the capital. The Cubans attacked the town and burned a portion of it.

BIG REWARD

Brings Many Detectives to the Scene of the Detrick Double Murder—A Large Funeral Thursday.

BELLEFONTEINE, O., Aug. 13.—The shocking and revolting Detrick double murder is still the talk of the town and excitement runs at fever heat, growing as each minute goes by. Thursday the bodies of the murdered couple were buried in the Spring Hills cemetery, the funeral being the largest ever held in this county, as many as 3,000 people being estimated to have attended.

It is now known that two gold watches, a revolver and a large tin box, containing the money hoarded by Detrick, was all that was taken. The box was found Thursday morning near a brush heap a short distance west of the house. It was entirely rifled. The exact amount of money the box contained is not known, but it is known that Detrick had hoarded up several thousand dollars.

Ex-County Sheriff John Sullivan Wednesday night arrested Lew Dearwester on suspicion. Dearwester once worked at the Detrick home and knew that Detrick had money hidden at his house. When taken to jail a $20 gold piece and some silver was found on his person. During the day Dearwester spent a $20 gold piece, and as five $20 gold pieces are known to have been in the hoarded money, suspicion points strongly toward Dearwester. Although the suspected murderer could give no explanation as to where he obtained the money, he was released. He has not been seen since he was released and will probably be rearrested if found.

Since the $1,000 reward was offered Wednesday night by Samuel Detrick, a brother of the murdered man, and the $1,000 reward offered by the board of county commissioners for the capture and conviction of the guilty parties, detectives have been flocking here, nine already being known to be in the city. Richards of Cincinnati, Wolf of Cleveland, Norris of Springfield and Fisher, of Indianapolis, being among them. Chief of Police F. M. Bell, of Lima, was here all Wednesday night with bloodhounds at the scene. He returned with the dogs Thursday morning, they failing to catch a trail, the crowd on the grounds having made it impossible for the dogs to find the scent.

Thursday Mrs. Wallace, a daughter of the dead people, made a sensational statement to the effect that she hoped that the work of unraveling the mystery would not be prosecuted, as she knew that the blow would "fall close."

Since this statement suspicion rests on a relative of the dead couple. Detective Witte, of Cincinnati, is here and is making an earnest endeavor to capture the large reward offered.

BELLEFONTEINE, O., Aug. 13.—About 10:30 Thursday night Tony Ford, of Mt. Victory, was arrested by a Cleveland detective and Officer Kernan, after Ford had been quizzed about an hour by the detective. The officers refused to talk, but it is believed Ford knows something about Dearwester. Everything quiet at midnight.

KENTON, O., Aug. 13.—Col. Kuert, of the Second regiment, O. N. G., was ordered to Bellefontaine Thursday evening to inspect the situation regarding the probabilities of military being needed on account of the Detrick double murder excitement there. As yet no orders for the militia to report for duty have been received.

ANARCHISTS

To Be Excluded From the United States—Immigration Bureau Issues Instructions in Regard to the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Commissioner Powderly, of the immigration bureau, has sent the following letter of instruction to immigration officials at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Quebec, Canada, relative to the anticipated arrival in this country of Spanish anarchists:

Information has reached this bureau to the effect that one Planas, a leader of the Spanish anarchists, has been expelled from France, being conducted to Havre, from which port it is expected he will sail to the United States. I am also advised that Tarrida Marmot, another Spanish anarchist, is believed to have gone to England and probably is en route to this country. A careful inspection should be made of arriving passengers in order that should any of this class be detected, a careful examination can be had as to their right of admission into the United States under existing laws.

It is stated at the bureau of immigration that there is no law under which persons can be excluded on the ground that they are anarchists. Now is anarchy anywhere declared to be a crime, so that if Planas and Marmot are refused admission to the country, the refusal must be based solely upon the fact that they come within the general immigration law as to paupers, contract laborers, criminals, etc. This law expressly provides, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to, or exclude, persons convicted of a political offense, notwithstanding said political offense may be designated as a felony, crime, infamous crime, or misdemeanor, involving moral turpitude, by the laws of the land whence he came or by the court convicting.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—A statement prepared at the bureau of statistics show that the value of goods imported into Canada and again exported into the United States during the past year subject to the 10 per cent discriminating duty under the recent opinion of the attorney general was $1,960,740. In 1894, the latest figures at present obtainable, the value of foreign goods coming into the United States through Canada, under consular seal, was about $6,000,000. The question of the assessment of the 10 per cent discriminating duty on this class of goods is now under consideration.

Surgeon General Weyman has telegraphed the Pennsylvania board of health for particulars regarding the death of cattle and poisons reported to have resulted from anthrax germs brought in hides from China to a tannery at Durbis, Pa. The creek which runs by the tannery is said by the newspaper reports to have become infected by the germs. Surgeon General Weyman says that a similar case was reported two years ago from Boscbury, Pa., but upon investigation it was discovered that the death both of men and animals had resulted from fly bites. The flies fed upon the decaying flesh on the hides and communicated the poison to the men and beasts which they bit. The surgeon general thinks it probable that the deaths at Dubois may upon investigation be placed to similar causes.

SOLEMN CEREMONY.

The Funeral of Senor Canovas Del Castillo—The Body Laid to Rest Amid Salvoes of Artillery and the Tolling of Bells.

MADRID, Aug. 14.—The funeral of Senor Canovas del Castillo Friday was a most touching and solemn ceremony. All the troops of the garrison lined the route along which the cortège moved, flags were lowered and the public buildings, embassies, consulates and clubs were heavily draped with crepe. More than a thousand wreaths were deposited in the death chamber. A salvo of artillery announced the starting of the funeral procession, which moved slowly through an enormous crowd, in which all heads were bare and many eyes were weeping.

A peculiarly poignant scene ensued as the Duke of Sotomayor, Marshal Martineau Campos, Marquis Pazo de la Merssed and the other pallbearers lifted the coffin, Senora Canovas, in a clear firm tone said:

"I desire that all should know I forgive the assassin. It is the greatest sacrifice I can make; but I make it for the sake of what I know of my husband's great heart."

Throughout the distance between the death chamber and the church, the road was strewn with flowers and laurels.

Senor Sagasta headed the cortège, which was formed of militia, deputies, senators, generals, admirals and delegations representing all the principal public bodies. The wreath of the queen regent rested upon the coffin and other floral tributes were carried in special carriages.

All the shops in the city were closed, and a very large proportion of the populace that thronged the streets appeared in mourning garb. The entire garrison marched past the coffin, and the services lasted from 4 until 7:30 p.m.

The remains of Senor Canovas were interred in the family vault in the St. Isidoro cemetery, amid salvoes of artillery and the tolling of all the bells of the city.

Murderer Willis Dead.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—Herbert A. Willis, the Taunton murderer, who was shot in an attempt to escape from the state prison last Tuesday, died in the hospital at the institution Friday.

Precautions Taken Against An Uprising.

MADRID, Aug. 14.—Military precautions have been taken for some time past against the possibility of a Carlist or republican rising, and the steps taken have been increased recently, chiefly here, at Barcelona, Bilbao, and at Seville.

CANTON, O., Aug. 14.—Burt E. Toten and Hay Prevost were married Thursday. Beer flowed freely at the reception and the wedding party became so boisterous that all participants were arrested and jailed. They spent the night in the lockup.

DON CARLOS

Favors Unflinching Severity in Repressing the Cuban Rebellion,

Followed by Generous Concessions to Local Requirements—The Carlist Movement Increased in Strength and Discipline—Time Comes, Will Fight.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Lausanne has had a long interview with Don Carlos on the death of Canovas and Cuban affairs.

Don Carlos declared that the American remonstrances and hints of interference were mere balloons essay, which ought not to be taken seriously. He said that the United States, if these attempts had been resolutely repelled by the Spanish government, would have withdrawn its extravagant pretensions. What was wanted in Cuba, he argued, was unflinching severity in repressing rebellion, followed by generous concessions to local requirements and aspirations.

In conclusion Don Carlos declared: "The Carlist movement in Spain has greatly increased in strength and discipline during the last decade. I am in touch with every branch of it. There will be no more futile risings or useless bloodshedding, but when the time is ripe every one will be ready to fight to the death for the throne."

MADRID, Aug. 16.—The political horizon is menacing. Senor Robledo has publicly declared in favor of the retention of Capt. Gen. Weyler and against reconciliation with the dissident conservatives.

It is expected that this will upset the plans of the conservative party and of the court, and will compel the queen regent to summon the liberals.

A PRISONER

Slashes Five Policemen With a Razor and Escapes By Jumping From a Window—Subsequently Wounded and Captured.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 16.—James Elbert arrested as a suspicious character and supposed to be an anarchist, created big excitement Sunday morning at the police station by slashing five policemen with a razor. One of the officers, George McIntyre, was horribly cut on the face, one wound extending from the ear to the throat, taking part of the ear. His condition is serious. The others, Geo. Cole, Jas. McEvoy, W. E. Coreless, and Wm. Kenney are badly cut, but not seriously. Elbert, after cutting his way through a guard of 15 policemen, made his escape from the station by jumping 30 feet from a rear window, hotly pursued by officers, while blood streamed from their wounds. After a chase of several squares, Officer Coreless finally fired his revolver, the bullet taking effect in Elbert's right arm and he was then captured. The man fought desperately and had to be clubbed into insensibility before he could be taken back to the station, Elbert now lies in the jail hospital in a precarious condition. Elbert is an Austrian, who had been working at the Armstrong cork factory until lately, when he was discharged on account of his anarchistic and troublesome ways. He has since been threatening Mr. Armstrong's life, and was arrested because he insisted on hanging around the factory after being repeatedly warned off the premises.

PROBABLE LYNCHING.

A Mob After the Assailant of Mrs. and Miss Heathcock.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 16.—Will Phillips, the man who recently criminally assaulted Miss Sallie Jones, daughter of a wealthy Georgia planter residing near this city and who was arrested in Arkansas, was taken to jail at Lafayette, Walker county, Ga., Sunday where the crime was committed. A mob had been organized to lynch Phillips as soon as Miss Jones identified him, but her father prevailed on them to let him go to trial.

Posses are in pursuit of the assailant of Mrs. and Miss Heathcock, and every road and avenue to Chickamauga Park is being guarded by armed men. If caught the man will never reach the jail, as more than a hundred men have sworn he shall die at once. Miss Heathcock and her mother have both recovered consciousness and have given an ample description of their assailant. A large reward has been offered for the man.

Col. Kuert, of the O. N. G., of Kenton, has been ordered here to inspect the situation and be prepared for a call of the militia.

DEERWESTER,

One of the Suspected Murderers of the Detrick Couple, Cut His Throat From Ear to Ear on His Wife's Grave.

BELLEFONTEINE, O., Aug. 14.—Tony Ford and Lewis Deerwester are now behind the bars under suspicion of the murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick.

Human bloodstains have been found on their clothes, with evidence of having been washed.

Bloody shoes and clothing belonging to both men have been found. Deerwester is now believed to have cut his throat in order to hide the bloodstains.

His self-inflicted wound is not considered to be very serious, although it is five inches long.

It is now alleged that Ford, Deerwester and the latter's brother, George, were seen on the night of the murder acting in a suspicious manner.

A most startling climax to the tragedy of the week came Friday morning.

The almost lifeless body of Lewis Deerwester, who was arrested on suspicion of being the murderer of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick, and who was subsequently released, was found Friday morning lying across the grave of his wife in Blue Jacket cemetery, two miles southwest of town.

Deerwester's throat had been cut from ear to ear.

The greatest excitement since the discovery of the dead and mutilated bodies of the aged couple Wednesday morning was occasioned when this news was brought to town early Friday morning.

Deerwester had worked for the aged couple, and was familiar with their premises and on the best of terms with them. He had been seen with gold money, and this was considered proof against him. He is a poor man and not used to handling gold. Deerwester was in attendance Thursday at the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Detrick.

In an account book in Deerwester's pocket was found by Sheriff Law the following note:

"Aug. 12.—Dear Friends: You are accusing me of a deed I did not do, and rather than disgrace my people I will take my life. So good by to all dear friends forever. God forgive me for this. I would rather die than be disgraced. I have never harmed nobody. I have no one to live for. All that was near and dear to me are gone. Farewell to all."

LEWIS DEERWESTER.

The book also contained a note and a piece of cedar from his wife's grave.

Miss Kate Taylor, of Blue Jacket Mills, while on her way to Bellefontaine Thursday evening, saw a man on his knees in the cemetery, but thinking it some one waiting to get in the schoolhouse to stay all night, she thought nothing of the matter.

The deed was committed with a large hunting knife found by the body.

When Tony Ford, of Mt. Victory, was arrested on suspicion late Thursday night by a Cleveland detective a large crowd gathered about the station house and threats of lynching should he prove to be the murderer were indulged in.

Deerwester has been taken to the county jail and an effort will be made to get him to confess. Nearly a thousand people are crowded about the jail.

Col. Kuert, of the O. N. G., of Kenton, has been ordered here to inspect the situation and be prepared for a call of the militia.

GEN. WEYLER

Sends His Resignation as Captain General of Cuba to Madrid.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana, Cuba, via Key West, says:

"I have learned, on what seems to be the best authority, that Capt. Gen. Weyler has sent his resignation to Madrid. This report is generally believed to be true.

There is no doubt that the resignation of Gen. Weyler is due to the assassination of Senor Canovas del Castillo, the premier of Spain, through whose personal wishes Capt. Gen. Weyler was retained in Cuba.

The report of Gen. Weyler's resignation is a cause for satisfaction among Cuban sympathizers and reconcentrationists, who in the advent of another chief of the loyal Spanish troops in Cuba, see only relief from the policy of concentration, which has resulted in such suffering to the pacificos in Cuba.

GOES TO KLONDYKE.

A Swindler Promises If He Strikes Pay-Dirt to Reimburse His Victims.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 14.—W. B. Wells, a grain dealer at Trafalgar, a small town in Johnson county, took a peculiar method of raising money to go to Alaska. Last Saturday he presented bills of lading to H. L. Kinney at the board of trade and the Acme Milling Co., each calling for 700 bushels of wheat. Upon each bill he drew $500. The wheat did not arrive, and Friday the firms received letters from Wells, confessing that the bills were forgeries, and stating that he had started with the proceeds for the Klondike. He said that if he struck it rich there he would repay them.

A Vase More Than Two Thousand Years Old.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Thomas Flanagan, a brother of James Flanagan, the champion hammer-thrower, threw the 12-pound hammer 163 feet and 4 inches at the Catholic club games at Jersey City Heights Sunday. The largest authentic throw of this missile previously made was 149 feet at the class games

LIFE MYSTERY.

There are songs enough of the home life, Of parents and children sweet, I sing of the many who stand alone, And whose lives are incomplete, Who in some way have missed the choicest Of blessings they most would prize, And look upon happiness only Through other more fortunate eyes:

Who bravely carry the burden Of a heavy daily cross, Whose tranquil, smiling faces Give no hint of pain or loss; Yet whose hearts are filled with yearning, Beyond their strength to deny, For the things that are sweetest and dearest Which alone can satisfy.

Oh sad are the ones who possessed them, And have watched them fade from sight, With the lingering look from loving eyes That had filled their lives with light; But sadder are those who, softly, In their inmost souls must say: "Not you!" to one another, They meet in their narrow way;

Yet who feel that the sun is shining E'en now on the thoughtful brow Of the man or woman in all the world Before whom their hearts would bow; Who in turn are wistfully waiting With eager outstretched hands, To welcome the long-delayed one Who would answer their soul's demands.

Oh, for those who miss each other Through all life's long sad years, Unloved, unlored for, and lonely, My eyes overflow with tears, But I think the loving Father Will some time make it clear, And Heaven's sweetest joys be given To those who missed them here.—Minnie May Curtis, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

A CASE IN EQUITY.

BY FRANCIS LYNDE.

[Copyright, 1895, by J. B. Lippincott Co.]

XIV.—CONTINUED.

There was a rasping noise, as of a hastily opened drawer, and the old man sprang to his feet and leveled a revolver at Thorndyke. His eyes blazed, and his voice quavered with excitement.

"By the 'Mighty'! if ye don't get out o' here!"

Philip stood his ground long enough to show his contempt for the argument of force; then he turned his back on the angry man and ran up the street to catch an electric car for the new courthouse. As soon as he could find a magistrate, he swore out a warrant for Pragmore's arrest and went himself with the deputy who was to serve it. As a matter of course, they found the office locked and empty; and, leaving the officer to continue the search for the notary, Philip went back to the Johannisberg to prepare the papers in the suit against the town company. The constable had promised to report in the course of the afternoon, and when evening came without any word from him, Philip resolved to go to the jail and see if Pragmore had been caught. With the heedlessness which goes hand in hand with triumphant perseverance, he left the forged deed, together with the unfinished papers, on the writing-table in his room at the hotel; and, picking his way through the obstructed streets, he was soon in the neighborhood of the courthouse. Under the branches of a water-oak, at a point where the light from the electric lamps at the crossings made a garish twilight, he stumbled over the body of a man lying across the sidewalk. Before he could recover himself he was promptly garroted, thrown down and held by two footpads while a third rifled his pockets. The assault was well planned and deftly executed, and when his assailants had left him Thorndyke was astonished to find that they had taken none of his valuables. Then it came to him like a sudden stroke of illness that their object had been to secure the forged deed, and he grew cold with dismay when he remembered where he had left it. The next moment he was racing madly toward the hotel, stumbling and falling over heaps of building material and paving-stones, and colliding blindly with chance pedestrians who happened to get in his way.

He breathed freely again when he reached his room and found that the papers were undisturbed, but the disquieting experience taught him the lesson of prudence which he might otherwise have gone wanting. Buttoning the papers into an inside pocket of his coat, he went out again, taking care to keep in the well-lighted and frequented streets until he reached a hardware store where he could buy a revolver. With the weapon in his pocket he felt safer; and, leaving Broadway, he once more turned his steps toward the jail. Pragmore had not been found; and, after assuring himself that a description of the missing notary had been telegraphed to the neighboring towns on the railway, Thorndyke went back to the hotel. Approaching the building by a walk through the grounds which led him beneath the windows of his own room in one of the southern gables, he was surprised to see them brilliantly lighted; and, bolting up the stairway at the end of the corridor, he was barely in time to save the Johannisberg from destruction. In his absence the room had been thoroughly and ruthlessly ransacked, and one of the gas jets—whether by accident or design he never knew—had been swung around against the mosquito netting, which was blazing and dropping a shower of small firebrands upon the white counterpane beneath it.

When he had put out the fire and gathered up his scattered belongings, Philip began to have a juster appreciation of the desperate character of the men with whom he had to deal, and he determined to take no more risks. After having his room changed, he telephoned to the stable for his horse and rode out to the Duncan farm, sleeping that night in the attic bedroom with the forged deed under his pillow.

XV.

ON THE MOUNTAIN.

The level rays of the morning sun were shooting across the eastern spur of John's mountain, pouring a noiseless valley of radiance against the opposite cliffs of the Bull, and bridging the valley of the Little Chivassee with bands of yellow light that made the shadows blue and cool by comparison. Up among the topmost twigs of the tree the breeze whispered steadily, with the sound like the patter of gentle rain; but in the depths of the forest, where the path from Duncan's to the plateau wound upward through the tangled undergrowth, the air was still and resonant, giving back sharply the snarl of the gravel and the rustle of dry leaves under the feet of the two men who climbed slowly toward the mountain-top. Notwithstanding the approach of autumn and the youth of the day, the heat was great enough to make the steep ascent laborious and exhausting; and Thorndyke stopped at the base of the upper tier of cliffs while Duncan went down on his hands and knees to drink from a spring bubbling clear and cold from the shelf of sandstone.

"I reckon hit ain't more'n ten mile th'o' the gulch."

Thorndyke looked at his watch. "Are you good for the tramp, Mr. Duncan? I'll need a witness."

Duncan signified his willingness to go, but it was with great difficulty that they persuaded the old mountaineer to trust himself within sight of the railway. When he finally yielded, they took up the line of march to the southward, with Kilgrow leading the way. After threading the forest of the plateau for three hours or more, they began to descend into a deep ravine, and Philip heard the murmur of running water long before they came in sight of the swift stream gurgling through a leafy tunnel at the bottom of the gorge. They stopped at the margin of the brook while Thorndyke got a drink.

"Your mountain miles are good measure, Mr. Kilgrow," he said, taking off his watch again. "How much farther is it?"

The old man lifted his hat and scratched his head reflectively with one finger. "I reckon hit might be 'bout two sights an' a horn-blow f'm yere."

Philip laughed and turned to Duncan: "I'm afraid you'll have to translate that for me."

"Ye'll be none the wiser when I do. Two sights—that's as far as ye can see, an' then as far as ye can see beyond; that; an' a horn-blow—that's as far as ye can hear the scrawin' o' a coo's horn frae the far end o' the second sight. D'ye ken the noo?"

"Perfectly," said Philip. "I hope we'll get there before dark."

"Hae ye made up yer mind what ye'll do next?"

"Not definitely. As I told you awhile ago, it depends very much upon what Kilgrow says. Yesterday I intended to prosecute immediately in both the civil and criminal courts, but I'm not so sure now that that would be the proper thing to do."

"Aye?" said Duncan, seating himself with his back against the cliff and making an inverted N of his sinewy length.

"No; to be frank about it, I think I lost my head when that deed turned up. It was a foolish thing to go to Pragmore the way I did. I might have known what would happen in case I wasn't able to scare him."

"An' can ye sue them yet?"

"Oh, yes; but they know as much as I do, now, and they will be prepared at all points. We can beat them in the end, but they can delay a settlement indefinitely. And I'm more afraid of delay than of anything else."

"Aye?"

"Yes. They have all the resources of the syndicate behind them, while I have nothing. They can give any amount of bail on the criminal charge, and when we get our verdict in chancery there may be nothing to recover from."

"But, man, there's the whole town built on Johnnie Keelgrow's land!"

"Yes, it's there to-day, and it may be there to-morrow; but it has grown up like Jonah's gourd, and it may be quite as short-lived."

Duncan nursed his chin reflectively. "That's just what Robbie Protheroe's ay'e hintin' at. He's a sharp lad, is Robbie."

"Of course I don't know anything about it," continued Thorndyke, following his own line of thought; "but other towns have flourished and failed, and Allacoochee may or may not prove to be an exception. Anyway, I'd like to get the thing settled while the pressure is high. It will be easier to get $50,000 now than $10,000 after the tide begins to turn."

Duncan's jaw fell, and he stared at Philip in speechless astonishment. "Feefty thousand dollars!" he exclaimed, when he could find breath to put his amazement into words. "Eh, man, man, but ye'll be killin' the goose outright!"

"No fear of that," laughed Philip, rising and taking the path again. "And if they don't call off their desperadoes it'll cost them more."

He spoke confidently, but he was troubled with many doubts and misgivings which poured in thickly upon the heels of yesterday's overconfidence.

One insurmountable obstacle the second thought had brought up to block the way to a legal contest: the court would require a heavy bond from the complainant, and who was to furnish it? Kilgrow had nothing, and the loss of his own fortune put it out of Thorndyke's power to offer security. Clearly, the thing must be managed in some way without a suit, and Philip's perplexity kept him silent while they were pushing through the woods on the plateau toward the Pocket.

When they came out upon the crag from which Thorndyke had first looked down into the narrow valley, they saw Kilgrow working in the field below, and Duncan summoned him by a shrill whistle. Thirty minutes later, the old mountaineer joined them on the cliff, and Duncan laid before him a plan which Philip had outlined. It was a proposal that they should try to bring about a settlement of the claim by moral suasion before proceeding to extremities; and Kilgrow's presence at the conference would be necessary, since he would have to execute a quit-claim in case Sharpless and Fench came to terms: As Duncan had foretold, the old man refused, positively and definitely: he could not be persuaded to trust himself in Allacoochee, and all the assurances of protection that Philip could give him went for nothing.

"Then there is only one other thing to do," said Philip, when he had exhausted his eloquence in the effort to convince Kilgrow that no harm should come to him; "you'll have to give me the power of attorney to sign a deed for you. Where is the nearest notary outside of Allacoochee, Mr. Duncan?"

Duncan caressed his stubby chin and considered. "There's ald Judge Garry, down at Glenco," he suggested.

"How far is that from here?"

"It's mair than a good sixteen miles round by the valley pike, but I'm thinkin' it's not that far across the mountain. How is that, Johnnie, man?"

"I reckon hit ain't more'n ten mile th'o' the gulch."

All the Democrats of Bourbon and adjacent territory are invited to be present.

A newspaper reporter at the age of thirty-two; a Governor's private secretary at the age of thirty-three; a President's private secretary at the age of thirty-five; a Cabinet officer at the age of forty-three, and now at forty-eight the Vice President of the Northern Pacific railroad, and a millionaire. Such are the steps in Daniel Lamont's almost phenomenal career. Let no pessimist say there is no longer a chance for young Americans of brain, pluck and industry.—[Louisville Times].

A SILVER exchange says that wheat has advanced in price because of short crops in other countries, and that neither gold, silver nor tariff cuts any ice in wheat prices. The silver papers would not admit that big crops in other countries made America's wheat bring low prices in previous years. The same money standard in use now was blamed for the low price of wheat in former years, the law of supply and demand always being hooted at by the silverites.

BREY BRYAN, Brer Blackburn, Brer Bland, Brer Teller and other silver agitators known to fame, are keeping very quiet as wheat goes up and silver down. The wave of prosperity seems to have knocked the wind out of their arguments.

Thin, Pale Children

One satisfaction in giving Scott's Emulsion to children is they never object to it. The fact is, they soon become fond of it. Another satisfaction is because it will make them plump, and give them growth and prosperity. It should be given to all children who are too thin, or too pale. It does not make them over-fat, but plump.

It strengthens the digestive organs and the nerves, and furnishes material for rich blood.

A Railroad Official's Experience.

M. EDWARD EDMOND, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 19 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their prostrating unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night.

I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMOND, P. O. Box 65, David City, Nebraska. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold on guarantee that first bottle benefits or money refunded.

THROUGH THE SHADOWS.

There's no sun to cheer the valley
Where death's chilling waters flow;
And of coast and clime beyond it
Those on this side do not know.

Birds sing not above those waters;
There mysterious ravens chant,
Giving earth nor name nor inkling
Of the land beyond their haunt.

Nothing grows by that cold river;
And grew lily there or thorn,
Would it hint of what is yonder—
Boon or ban, or murk or morn?

Yet must all go through that darkness,
Lighted by no cheering beam,
Through the waters and the shadows
That o'erhang the chilling stream.

For no bridge o'er spans that river,
Nor can mortals sail the wave;
Nor can science guide the farer,
Or enhearten to brave.

Nor can reason give the pilgrim
Boatman, compass or a bark;
Yet by faith he gains the daring
For the torrent and the dark.

Faith inspires him with visions
Of the Heaven of his quest,
Of a land beyond the shadows,
Of the country of the blest.

And right onward to that Heaven,
Onward through the chilling stream,
Gladly, calmly, fares the pilgrim,
Couraged by faith's cheering beam;

Onward to eternal splendors
Where majestic mountains rise
In the radiance of the sunshine
Of the country of the skies.

Fragrant roses bloom forever
In the paradise above,
And the lilies to the zephyrs
Breathe the sweetness of their love.

In the forest aisles of Heaven
Birds and brooks and zephyrs sing
Of the beauties and the glories
Of the country of the King;

And the music of the numbers
Of the minstrelsy on high
Shall intensify and sweeten
Through the ages of the sky.

JACK AND JILL.

BY J. A. FLYNN.

"T'S sush a drefful pity," said little Babs, "for Auntie Jill to be cowwy and cwy!"

"Well, she needn't cry unless she likes," observed Rex, who understood things, being nine.

Auntie Jill, who heard them from the dark corner behind the curtain, stole away to her bedroom, because she hadn't half done her crying. Then the plot began.

"Girls and ladies," protested Babs, "have to cwy sometimes, 'cause they do. If Daddy doesn't cut off my hair and make me grow up a man I shall cwy when I'm a lady."

"It isn't any good," objected wise Rex. "When I'm a man I shall be a hunter, and kill Indidns and lions, and sha'n't cry for anything."

Babs shook her golden head. "I should cwy if they hurtled you, Wex. Wouldn't you cwy if a big lion caughted me and eated me all up?"

Rex put one arm protectingly around her, because nine is old and big, you see. "No, Babs. I should kill the lion; that would be ever so much better. Let's play tibby-cat's a lion, and shoot him with the popgun, shall we?" But tibby-eat bolted to the apple tree; and the rocking horse was broken, and Rex had split the doll playing headsman to her "Lady Jane Grey."

"I wis' Auntie Jill would come down-stairs an' play suffink," sighed Babs.

"I'd rather Uncle Jack take us fishing, or play ball," said Rex. "Are you sure mamma said he wouldn't ever come here again?"

"Certain sure," assented Babs; "an' he wasn't our Uncle Jack, never any more, mamma said—truly, Wex."

"He never was our uncle, really," explained the future hunter, "only going to be. He was real nice, and I don't see what Auntie Jill wanted to go and change him for. It's just like women and girls."

"I'se sure Auntie Jill wouldn't be naughty, ever," said loyal Babs, indignantly.

"Then what is she crying for?"

"I specks' cause Uncle Jack—"

"You said he wasn't uncle any more, Babs."

"Well, 'cause Uncle—that-used-to-be-Jack—"

"That isn't right, either, Babs. He's Jack—that-used-to-be-uncle."

"You're wewwy unkind, Wex," pouted his six-year sister.

"Don't be a goose," replied Rex, loftily.

"Well, I'se sure Uncle Jack has been naughty, 'cause Mammy looked drefful angwy when she teiled me about him. An' Auntie Jill is ewyng 'cause—'cause she ewies when you're naughty and has to be shut in ze cupboard."

"You're a horrid little kid, Babs," said Rex wrathfully, marching away.

"No, I'se not. Don't go away, Wex, please don't. I'se so welly misable." And kind-hearted little Babs threw herself along the rug and sobbed.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Rex, after he had soothed her with two kisses, a marble, a "conqueror," and half an apple stolen out of the dining-room. "We'll go and tell Uncle Jack that auntie's crying awful and ned better come and say he's sorry—else no one won't love him ever any more."

"Oh, Wex," cried Babs rapturously, "wouldn't it be beautiful! An' I would wear my new hat, if you could get it down from ze cupboard, so I would be nice and 'spectable. I se sure mammy wouldn't mind if we were going to fesh Uncle Jack." So Rex tiptoed on a chair, putting his hand in that of Uncle—who-used-to-be, because he was a very and they went round by the sweet stuff shop, because they generally went that way with Uncle Jack, and a heavy new penny was burdening Rex's pocket. Besides, everyone knows that brandy balls are excellent nourishment for travelers of they get lost in the woods. And if they eat them before they get lost, they make sure of them, and don't "sticky" their pockets. Thanks to such prudential measures, the young explorers reached the plank across the ditch in good spirits, and as happy as bold travelers should always be.

The plank was not a long one; but the water was so near Rex's feet when they dangled, and it was such a good opportunity to shoot fish if they should appear, that it took a good while to cross over. Then they had to go the long way round the lane, because the field was full of cows; and, as Babs said: "Cows are drefful fings, 'cause zey might be bulls." So the autumn afternoon was turning to evening when they reached the fish pond where Uncle Jack ought to be. But no jolly uncle appeared—perhaps his mamma had put him in the cupboard, because he was so naughty and made Auntie Jill cry. Rex and Babs began to feel cold and tired.

"I wis—I wis we had a lot of tea," lamented Babs.

"Perhaps we shall come to a camp," said Rex consolingly, "travelers always do. Then they will give us some buffalo cooked in a pot on three sticks over the fire; and tell us where Uncle Jack is."

So they trudged on, cheerfully, a little farther. But it got so dusk, and the cows looked so large and wild in the fading light that they might almost be real buffaloes—which are very different from play ones, as everybody knows. Bab's shoe stuck in the mud, and couldn't be found, and Rex fell in some stinging nettles, and they both got scratched scrambling through a hedge. So poor little Golden-hair sat down on a bank and cried, and Rex stroked her head, and would have cried too, if crying hadn't been out of the question for a big boy, who was nearly a man, dada said.

Just then Farmer Burton came along with his dog Rover. He found them some apples out of his pocket, and listened attentively whilst they explained matters. Of course, he ought to take them straight home, but—a wicked smile crossed the old man's lips—they had come out to find Uncle Jack, and perhaps it would be a good thing if they found him. He had seen him walking distractedly about in Sleepy Hollow a few minutes ago, and he knew something about lovers' quarrels. Why, when he was courting Dame Margery, 40 years ago, they parted forever once a month! But he didn't tell the youngsters anything about this, only took up Babs on his broad shoulders, and walked along so fast that Rex had to trot to keep up with him.

"Why do you laugh, Misser Burton?" inquired Babs.

"Oh, because you're such a funny little girl to go hunting buffaloes."

"But it was Wex zat was goin' to shoot zem," apologized she.

"Oh, I beg his pardon," said the jovial old farmer. "Perhaps he would like to stop behind and shoot them now?"

But Rex thought they'd better be getting home as it was so late. Buffaloes, he admitted, in his private mind, were not so nice to hunt in the dark.

As they were crossing the hollow, a big gentleman came striding along.

"Here's Uncle Jack!" they both exclaimed at once.

"Why, Babs—Rex!" cried he in amazement. "Whatever—"

"Oh, they've come to look after you, Mr. Jack," said old Burton, solemnly. "They'll tell you all about it. Perhaps you'll see em home as it is getting late."

So saying he disappeared over a stile with remarkable agility for his years and size. All the way home he laughed, until Rover thought that he must be going mad, like some ill-balanced dogs in hot weather. All that evening he chuckled to himself, until his dame confided to the hired man that the master had something on his mind for certain; and the hired man thought that "mebbe he'd had an offer for the heifer." But not for many a long day did he tell the story of the hunters.

"Well, you young pickles!" said Jack, who used to be uncle, "what the deuce am I to do with you?" he added, under his breath, as he shouldered the girlie.

Babs looked at Rex, and Rex looked at Babs. "We were looking for you," said the hunter at length.

"Cause we fort—" said the huntress; and then she, too, stopped.

Uncle Jack smiled dimly and kissed them both. "Well?" he inquired.

"We 'spect you'd been naughty," explained Rex.

"To Auntie Jill," added Babs, "cause she's been cwyin'."

"Awful!" said Rex, solemnly.

"An' we 'spect you'd be solly," pleaded Babs, cuddling up to him.

"Else no one would love you," put in Rex, emphatically, feeling that his advancing years justified a judicial attitude.

Jack hesitated and a queer lump came up in his throat. Jill was a tiresome little tease. It hadn't been altogether his fault. But Jill crying! Dear little Jill! "Who told you to come?" said he, looking puzzled.

"Nobody," answered Rex.

"We tolded our own selves," explained Babs.

Of course Jill wouldn't send them; he might have known that. "Why do you think Auntie Jill cried because I'd been naughty?"

"Cause she ewies when Wex is naughty, an' mamma puts him—"

"Don't be such a donkey, Babs," interrupted Rex, indignantly.

"Well," said Jack, "I suppose I must take you young rascals home, anyhow."

"An' say you's solly," pleaded Golden-hair.

"I should if I were you," counseled Rex, putting his hand in that of Uncle—who-used-to-be, because he was a very

LOUDS WERE DISPELLED.

Happy Influence of a Gentle Protest and a Square Meal.

"If there is anything I despise and detest," said Mrs. Billtops, "it's melancholy."

Mrs. Billtops is not often so vigorous in speech as this, and when she is Mr. Billtops knows that it is time to brace up. As a matter of fact he takes usually a cheerful view; but when he is depressed, as he is occasionally, he is gloom and silent and solemn enough, and he makes everybody around him wretched. The children, sitting at the table, stop talking, the dinner gets cold, and everybody is chilly and miserable except, perhaps, at the last, Mr. Billtops himself, who finds, finally, a sort of melancholy pleasure in the general depression that he has caused.

But Mrs. Billtops has no use for anybody that casts a gloom. She has her own trials, but she never bothers anybody else about them; outwardly, at least, she is cheerful and spirited always, and she can't abide anybody that lets his troubles so far overcome him that he inflicts them on other people, too, and so she says:

"If there is anything I despise it's melancholy."

At that Mr. Billtops takes a brace. He looks up and smiles. It is wonderful with what alacrity the children respond, and Mr. Billtops responds to that, and gloom is dispelled once more by the ever grateful light of cheerfulness. And when Mr. Billtops, as the phrase goes, gets something to eat, he feels himself better still. He remembers what he has often said to himself, that no feeling of depression should ever be accepted as genuine until it has been subjected to the test of a good square meal.

Mamma looked astounded and Auntie Jill found just one tear to come half out of each eye—for it hadn't been all Jack's fault, really, you know. Jack stepped a little nearer to her and half held out one hand and half didn't. "Don't be silly, children; you do not understand," said mamma, reprovingly.

But dada smiled one of his quiet smiles, as, taking one little one up on each knee, he sat down on the sofa beside mamma. "I think they do," said he.

Then Jack got very near Jill and took hold of both her hands. "My dear little Jill," said he, rather brokenly. And she put her head on his shoulder and cried and said—but really it isn't fair to tell what she said. Anyhow it must have been satisfactory to Rex and Babs, for those young scamps laughed with glee at the prospect of unlimited fishing, and ball, and swings, and pennies, now that Jack—that-used-to-be-uncle—that-was-to-be was reinstated.—St. Paul's.

TREATMENT OF CONSUMPTION.

Fresh Air the Best Prescription for Weak Lungs.

By those who remember the cruel disappointment and the dashing of hopes which followed the announcement seven years ago that Koch had discovered a cure for consumption, the news of the preparation of another remedy by him will not be hailed with unmixed delight. It is possible that a real remedy for this disease may be found some day, and when it is we may be sure that there will be little delay in its adoption by physicians; but the premature publication of these alleged "cures" is greatly to be regretted because of the misery and heartrending sorrow which their failure causes to thousands of disappointed sufferers.

When blindness and deafness and inability to use the hands, and such bodily weakness as makes movement impossible—when all these have overtaken the old, then the dregs are indeed bitter. And then there is nothing for it but the grand, brave dignity of patience—the noble resignation which accepts the inevitable and makes the best of bad conditions.

Patient old age always finds friends and sympathizers, where the peevish and the grumbler, like camphor atoms, repel all with whom they come in contact.

When old age is selfish and remiss—thinking only of its past joys or its present pains, to whom patience is a natural virtue, and the shrinking from annoyances is a natural instinct, these young shrink from the poor, soured old creature, whose talk is a threnody and whose daily life is an unwilling martyrdom.

They cannot console, and they feel the jealousy which denies them sympathy and gives them instead an angry kind of reprobation. They suffer in the cold and shadow of a loveless and unsympathetic, selfish and grasping age. They would give love if they had love to give them; but when they know that the glory of their young days serves as a text for unkindly comments and unsympathetic feeling, then they withdraw, and shrink, and fail to show those sweet attentions which the young love to show the old—if so be those dregs are swallowed patiently and are not flung as so much poison into the fresh faces whose lips are red with the wine as yet sparkling, foaming and unexhausted.—Chicago Journal.

With Advancing Summer.

Some of the newest skirts have trimmed sides and a narrow, plain front; others show the back as well, ornamented.

No matter what anyone may say to the contrary, odd waists of taffeta are still numbered in the wardrobes of women of fashion, and will be this fall.

You can hardly put too much lace on your midsummer gowns, whether they be of silk, cotton or the very fashionable thin woolen goods of a semi-transparent nature, like the revived bargeons and veillings worn.

There is every prospect of tucks remaining in fashion for the fall, and the repeated cashmere gown will be ornamented in this manner.

The round, tucked corsage is too becoming to slender figures to allow it to drop, and the dry goods merchant will rejoice at the fashion that sells more material.—Chicago Record.

NEW CURE FOR SNAKE BITES.

Animals Vaccinated with the Virus Are Immune to Injury.

The task of artificially rendering animals immune from snake poison was not an easy one, for the process depends upon training the animal to gradually withstand larger and larger doses of the venom; and considering the intensely toxic character of the substance which had to be handled, the danger was ever present of the animal succumbing to venom poison before its serum had acquired the requisite pitch of protective power to render it of service as an antitoxin. Dr. Calmette tells us that he carried out a very large number of experiments before he met with success. But it is not necessary here to discuss his various efforts; suffice it to say that at length his labors were rewarded, and the following extract from one of his memoirs describes the methods which he now adopts for his purpose:

"The best method of procedure for the purpose of vaccinating large animals destined to produce antivenomous serum consists in injecting them from the outset with gradually increasing quantities of the venom of the cobra mixed with diminishing quantities of a one to sixty solution of hyPOCHLORITE of lime. The condition and the variations in the weights of the animals are carefully followed in order that the injections may be made less frequently if the animals do not thrive well. Quantities of stronger and stronger venom are in turn injected, first considerably diluted, and then more concentrated; and when the animals have already acquired a sufficiently perfect immunity, the venoms derived from as large number of different species of snakes as possible are injected. The duration of the treatment is of considerable length—at least 15 months—before the serum is sufficiently active to be used for the purpose of treatment."

During the past three years an immense number of animals have been vaccinated by this method at the Pasteur Institute at Lille, where Dr. Calmette is now a director; and in a paper published a few weeks ago we are told that they have horses there which have yielded

THE CORN HARVEST.

Labor-Saving Devices Have Made It's Gathering Easy.

Harvesting the corn crop is being made easier every year by improvements in labor-saving machinery and devices. Large commercial crops are cut, tied and left in straight rows by the improved corn harvester, while the bundles placed in shocks or stocks of 12 to 20 bundles to cure are then drawn to the barn and run through the shredder. Farmers who cannot afford the latest and improved machinery, or who have small areas of corn, cut by sled as illustrated below, or by hand cutter. The arms thus cut have to be tied in bundles, various materials being used for this purpose, some using two or three cornstalks, others a small handful of long, strong straw, swamp grass or willows. But whether cut by improved machinery or by hand cutter, the large bundles, shocks or stocks have to be securely fastened to withstand the fall wind and storms.

To make a corn cutter, as portrayed therewith, make a platform with runners six feet long and two inches thick; the higher the runners the higher it will cut; eight-inch plank should do. Mortise three crosspieces of two by four into top of runners. Nail boards on cross ties to make a platform 30 inches wide and nearly six feet long. Get a good steel knife and make it very sharp, say 22 inches long and five inches wide. Bevel the edge from the bottom or underside. Have a rod made with an eye in the center and curved, in order to fasten either end to a runner and hitch a horse in the center. This rod should be of one-half inch round iron, and long enough to work nicely, as shown at a. Bore a hole in platform or runner, and put in a stake about six inches high (b); even across with the base of rod (c). Another stake of the same size, but 20 inches high, on the right side of platform near the edge, and 21 inches from the front of platform (d). Take a rod of five-eighths inch iron, 67 inches long and weld a piece of flat iron one-half inch thick and eight inches long to the end of it; bolt the flat piece to platform (13 inches from center to back of platform), and bend the rod forward 17 inches above the platform, as in e. Bend the rod so as to have it extend out over the edge of the platform, over and back of the knife (h), then bend the rod in so as to extend about two inches over the platform at the center two by four cross brace (f). From there bend the rod out to g. Be sure to have it carry the same height all the time.

The bends in the rod are made in order to bring in the corn and lay it across the platform without the help of a man. In this way the danger of standing over the knife is averted. Nail a small stick something like a lath from top of stake d to the outside runner few inches ahead of the knife. Bolt the knife to platform about 26 inches from back part of platform with two bolts, and have the knife slant back considerably. I put a scrap piece of two-inch plank under the platform at c and h, to make the platform more solid where the large rod and knife were bolted fast. The large rod from g to e should be with bends 50 inches long. Directly across it is 48 inches, thus using two inches for bends. The large rod is outside of stake d about five inches. Hitch on a quiet horse, hang the lines on d and ride on rear of platform, and when a large pile of corn is cut and laid across the sled, stop and shock it up.—Farm and Home.

WOMEN AS FARMERS.

Peculiar Scheme to Be Inaugurated by a Nebraska Woman.

Mrs. Hattie N. Bemis, of Arabia Neb., does not see why women should not be successful as farmers, and announces that she is going to try the experiment if she can get a dozen women to assist her. She owns a large tract of land in northwestern Nebraska which she says she intends to give to 12 deserving widows of northwestern farmers. In return she will require them to cultivate it without man's assistance. She says she will start them out with all the machinery they need, a sufficient supply of cattle, horses, swine and poultry to serve as a nest egg, and money to last them until the first harvest can be disposed of. She admits that the climate is dry, but proposes to instruct her wards in the operation of a system of soil culture by which method experiments have proved the rainfall of the section is sufficient to insure bountiful crops. The nearest the women will be allowed to come to dealings with men is to sell the crops to them. If Mrs. Bemis ever learns that a man has been employed about the premises the farms will revert to her. Any member of the community who marries will also forfeit her title to a share in the property.—Chicago Chronicle.

MAINTAINING THE STANDARD.

One of the causes of the deterioration of flocks of poultry is the practice of selling off the old hens and using pullets. Pullets will probably lay more eggs than will hens the first year, but chickens hatched from eggs laid by pullets are not as strong and vigorous as those produced from eggs laid by hens. It is also less expensive to retain the hens than to feed the pullets a whole year before they are old enough to lay. Hens are serviceable until five years old, and sometimes longer, the stock being less liable to disease and loss of vigor if cocks 18 months old and hens over two years old are used for breeding purposes instead of pullets that are mated with cockerels.

HIGH-CLASS POULTRY.

Why the Progressive Farmer Will Raise No Other Kind.

No man has a better chance to keep high-class poultry than the farmer. He has unlimited range for them, and this is conducive to health and best results in rearing the young. He produces at first cost every necessary food product that goes to keep a flock during the year, and no one who desires to purchase eggs for hatching would ever buy of a breeder who keeps his fowls penned up if he knew where he could get eggs from farm-fresh fowls.

There is just as good a market for high-class poultry as there is for poultry for market, and the demand is always good for good stock. The farmer who keeps this kind of poultry has two chances to make money. His flock will be profitable as an investment at market prices, and he will make many sales without effort at much above market prices.

It is no trouble at all, as the writer knows from experience, to get from 50 cents to one dollar a dozen for eggs from high-class hens during the hatching season, and even at the smaller price there is an immense profit in the business.

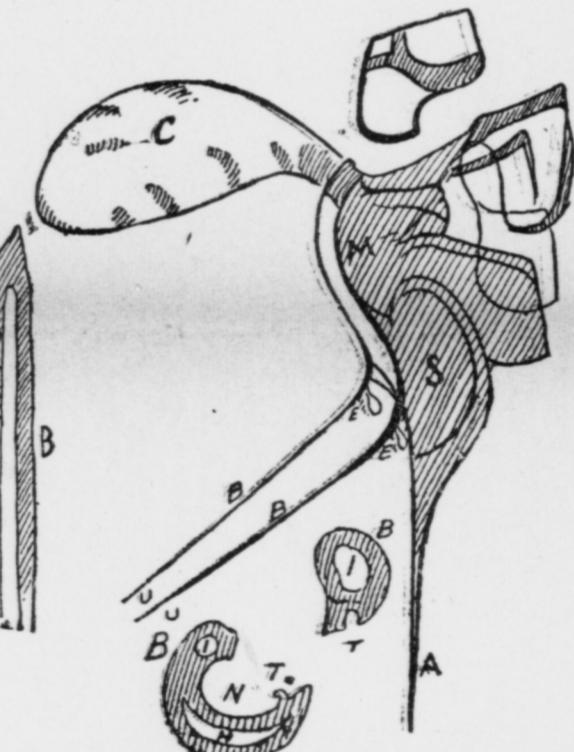

With the better care that is always given to good stock comes a greater return in eggs and meat for the feed used, and here is an additional profit on the transaction.

There is no excuse in these days that justifies any farmer in allowing his flock of hens to remain mongrels. The man who does this is standing in his own light and does not live up to his opportunities. It does not need fancy houses, elaborate systems of yards nor extraordinary skill in breeding to make a success with fine poultry. Plain, hard common sense, such as is needed to raise good crops and conduct any farm successfully, is better than any number of nice theories which are of no practical value.—Farmers' Voice.

THE STING OF A BEE.

It Is a Very Complicated and Delicate Structure.

The organ of defense which worker bees possess is a very complicated structure. The sting is composed of two highly polished, sharp hollow spears or lancets, B, B, and an awl, A, as portrayed in the cut, held firmly together by projections T on the central one, which fit into grooves T on the sides of the other two. These lancets lying together form a tube between them. The central lance A, sometimes called the sheath, is larger than the others and has a cylindrical reservoir S at its base which connects with the poison sac C, by the tube M, and below

STRUCTURE OF A BEE'S STING.

by a slit with the tube made by the joining of the three lancets. The smaller lancets, B, B, have their bases peculiar valves, E E. Their points are barbed, U U, in the sectional drawing, which also shows the tube in the lance, and the openings, O O, connecting the tube with the exterior. These barbs catch and hold, causing the sting to be left in when it is used. The poison is driven through the openings and through the tube formed by the lance, into the object stung. This poison is an acid fluid which the bee secretes and stores in the sac C. Being acid an alkali, as ammonia or soda, will neutralize it and help to allay the pain and swelling.—Farm and Home.

HINTS FOR BEEKEEPERS.

Shade the hives when the weather is warm.

Put starters of thin foundation in the section boxes.

Look out for robbers when the harvest becomes scarce.

Basswood is the greatest honey producer while in bloom.

Remove all frames filled with brood from the brood chamber.

Put the honey in the driest, warmest room about the house.

If exposed to cold or dampness honey will granulate in the cells.

Strong colonies at the proper time insure a good honey harvest.

If you work for extracted be careful not to extract too close.

A little pine tar smeared on a board will drive ants from the hive.

A weak solution of carbolic acid and salt is a good remedy for bee stings.

Where the honey is extracted a large number of extra combs are necessary.

The only way to keep drones for any length of time is to keep them in queenless colonies.—St. Louis Republic.

Good News from Missouri.

Robert Cornwell, a Barton county (Mo.) farmer, living near Golden City, after numerous experiments, thinks he has succeeded in developing a potato that will grow without vines. They grow entirely under ground, and will do away with the fear of potato bugs, which cost so much to destroy each season, not to mention the damage they do. A field planted with the vineless potato may be worked with the ordinary harrow. Should the new potato prove to be a good producer, as Mr. Cornwell hopes, it is likely to supersede the present variety.

DONKEY, DOG AND GOAT.

The Three Great Sights of a Trans-continental Journey.

"The three oddest things that I ever saw outside of New York," said a New Yorker who had gone overland to Denver and returned by water way of Galveston, "were a donkey, a dog and a goat. The donkey had the native power of the single bob-tail car that goes up the hill on South Broadway, Denver. He was an amusing fellow. After I made my first trip up that steep hill, I was astonished to see the conductor unhook the donkey and put him aboard the car. The dashboard was fitted up as a sort of stall, and he stood there sideways, when the car started back down the hill under its own impetus. The donkey's face took on a delighted expression as he found himself in the role of passenger. He really seemed to be grinning at the conductor and the passengers.

I saw the dog as I was about to enter the Tabor opera house in Denver. The dog was called Bill, and he was part of the outfit of a cigar store in the opera house building. He was a black spaniel. He was rigged up in zouave trousers and jacket trimmed with gold braid, and had a tasseled top on his head, and spectacles on his nose. The oddest thing about him was that he sat on his haunches, with his paws in the air, actually smoking a cigarette like a confirmed cigarette fiend. I found that he had been trained to smoke the cigarettes while the audience was going into the theater as an advertisement of his owner's business. That was the first time I had ever seen a dog smoking.

"I made the acquaintance of the goat in a tobacco factory in Key West. There were 200 Cuban girls there, nearly all of them pretty and all of them smokers or chewers of tobacco. The goat was their particular pet. He was the biggest goat I ever saw, almost as large as a Shetland pony, with big branching horns and perfectly tame. He playfully butted the girls or pranced around among them. His best trick, however, was the larceny of their dinner baskets. He used to go nosing around until he found a particularly choice luncheon. He would knock over the basket, seize the lunch and dash out doors with it. No amount of chastisement had ever broken him of the trick. Of course I saw wonderful scenery in the journey, but the donkey and the dog and the goat were by long odds the most interesting living things that I encountered."—N. Y. Sun.

NORWAY'S VOTING LAW.

It Is the Most Liberal of Any Country in the World.

The odelsting, the Norwegian equivalent of a lower house, has passed the bill granting the right of franchise to Norwegian citizens temporarily residing abroad. If the lagting indorses this action Norway will enjoy the distinction of having the most liberal voting laws of any country in the world. Although the bill has in view chiefly Norwegian sailors, its provisions are not restricted to this class, as was at first supposed.

Its main features are as follows: The voter must first prove that he has not been away from Norway longer than three years before the election day, and the ballot must not be cast longer than three months before the election. The ballot need not contain the names of the candidates, but must not be cast longer than three months before the election. The ballot must be made out in the name of the party.

By all but members of crews of Norwegian ships the voting must be in the presence of the local Norwegian consul, the excepted class voting on board ship before the captain. This would seem to exclude all Norwegian sailors on foreign vessels who are unable to appear before a consul within the prescribed time. It is not at all certain the bill will pass the upper house, as considerable opposition has arisen because of the increased facilities for fraudulent voting offered by it.—N. Y. Post.

Misspelling a Historic Name.

Through the blunder of some unknown person, committed years ago, a glaring piece of inexplicably poor spelling is still on view in the finance committee room in the city hall, and is the subject of much unfavorable comment by historical scholars. The portrait of Rev. Henry Augustus Muhlenburg hung for many years in Independence hall as a tribute to the preacher-patriot's services during the revolution, with his name beneath it spelled "Henry Muhlenburg." The same egregious errors are now visible in the city hall. Rev. Henry Augustus Muhlenburg was one of the first Lutheran ministers in this country. On one occasion he carried a gun into his pulpit at Reading, and at the conclusion of the services invited all his male parishioners to follow him to Valley Forge, which they did. Dr. Muhlenburg was also the first speaker of the house of representatives of the United States after the constitution was adopted in 1783, and his name is at least worthy of sufficient remembrance to be spelled correctly.—Philadelphia Record.

Costly Plants.

"I suppose," said the amateur botanist, "that orchards are the most expensive plants in the world."

"I am not so sure of that," replied Mr. Dinwiddie. "I have seen the assertion that $500,000,000 is invested in electric lighting plants in this country."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

Too Favorable.

"I am afraid," said the optimist reluctantly, "that the flying machine our friend talks about is a mere fancy."

"No," replied the skeptic, "it isn't even that. I have heard of such a thing as a flight of fancy."—Washington Star.

B. & O. Improvements. The work of straightening the track and reducing the grade at Tabbs Station on the second division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad was recently completed, and the first train to use the new line was No. 1, the New York and St. Louis flyer. A heavy grade and three bad curves have been eliminated by this work. A mile east, at Meyer's Hole, a similar improvement has also been completed after months of work. Several reverse curves and a nasty and dangerous dip are done away with at this point. Near Meyer's Hole, at Tablers, the alignment of the track is being materially changed, and as in the other two improvements, bad grades and sharp curves are being removed. This part of the track will be done in six days and then a series of very dangerous places will have been entirely removed. This work in its entirety means the hauling of several additional cars in each freight train, besides reducing the danger of derailments to almost nothing. The second division, running from Cumberland to Brunswick, will soon be in first-class condition and more cheaply operated than ever.

Indoors, particularly in the sitting posture, are far more prejudicial to health than excessive muscular exertion in the open air. The farm lies four miles east of Paris, Ky., on the Paris & Jacktown turnpike, and contains 293 acres, 3 rods and 39 $\frac{1}{2}$ poles of first class bluegrass land, all well fenced and abundantly supplied with everlasting springs and pools for live stock and is mostly now in grass.

The improvements consist of a modern built two-story frame residence situated in a lovely woodland, with lawn extending to the pike, and contains a hall and seven rooms, bath room, kitchen and pantry, a long veranda in front, with rear porches above and below, handsome cabinet mantel and tile hearths in each room, and all handsomely papered, and finished in walnut and cherry. There is a large dry cellar of several rooms with inside and outside entrances; a splendid cistern of pure water at the door. There are four servants' rooms, ice house, barns, stables, carriage-house, meat and poultry houses with yards, and all necessary outbuildings; a fine orchard; in fact, with the location, valuable improvements, and the fertility of its soil, it is one of the most desirable homes in the Bluegrass region of Kentucky.

Mr. N. H. Bayless, of Paris, Ky., will take pleasure in showing the farm to anyone, or will furnish any additional information desired.
